FINANCIAL.

Heavy rain yesterday made Madison street fuller than usual and not a word of news was to be gathered. The exchange rate on New York and eastern par buying, & premi-um selling; New Orleans & discount, selling at par. Fall River sight is taken at par. The New York Tribune says: "The continued success of the funding of the 6 per cents into Secretary Sherman to use the full powers granted by the resumption act of 1875, to the end of having the treasury and the actual outstanding currency in positions to render obedience to the mandatory clause of the act-to-wit, full resumption on January 1, 1879 possible, naturally tend to reduce the price of the bonds likely to be called, and hold in check any speculation for an advanced premium on gold. An examination makes it evident that the treasury's success must rest in the funding of legal-tenders, and not in an accumulation of gold. A gradual and steady reduction of the demand liabilities will not invite the hostility of all foreign financial institutions, as would the impossible scheme of preparing for resumption by the hoarding of a sufficient sum of gold. In the matter of gold surplus, the treasury to day is much eaker than is generally supposed, $16,237,-500. Without taking into account whether or not the department is a debtor or creditor in gold on the existing funding operations, all the coin (including silver) it possesses over and above demand claims is $43,024,400, of which $26,786,400 will become due for interest already accrued. These figures clearly demonstrate the folly of undertaking specie sumption with anything like $300,000,000 outstanding legal tenders suddenly converted into demand claims for gold coin, and show the necessity of the funding plan baving full play for the succeeding nineteen months." There was nothing of interest quoted on our local market. Gold was lower, quoting at one time in the morning 10514 in New York.

COTTON.

The cotton market had no features of special interest yesterday. Liverpool was unchanged, except that arrivals opened lower; New York opened dull and weak. Prices remained unchanged at all the principal markets. In our market there was no possibility of activity, owing to the heavy and continued rain; the sales were all to spinners, prices were firm and so closed. The New York correspondent of the New Orleans Picayune writes: "Liverpool was again the cause of disappointment—that market failing to move a single hair's breadth upward in response to the American buoyancy. This is regarded the more strange, in the face of peace rumers of the past few days, and which have aided in securing advanced figures for the securities of all nations. It either shows that the cotton trade has no faith in the rumors, or else, which is quite likely, that the trade is One of the latter class choked up the culvert on Beale street, causing a great flood of water in that locality. Ryland, of the Arkansas City Post, did not get riled at our little pleasantry about him, but good-naturedly came back at us in the following vein: "That hat came to time. It took a fine boat and a fast one to bring it, and now we flourish in it, to the admiration of the ladies and the envy of our sex. We return our warmest thanks to the river editor of the APPEAL for his kind invitation to see us through when we go to Memphis, and we feel sure we will have a big time. We haven't any objections to being mentioned in connection with Joe Flynn even as a 'Bean Puncher,' but we do seriously object to being taken for anybody's 'twin.' We ain't 'twins,' never was and won't be, if we know ourselves. The nearest we ever came to it was when a fellow slapped us on the shoulder and took us for Nat Green. That fellow died suddenly then and there, and since that we ain't anybody's 'twins;' please remember that, because we don't want to hurt anybody just

" Up the Raging Forked-Deer. DYERSBURG, TENN., June 8, 1877. RIVER EDITOR APPEAL—The scriptures tell us that after the flood, "Noah became an husbandman, and planted a vineyard, and drank of the wine, and was drunken." Asimilating his feelings to my own, and the surfeit of water. He didn't need any leads-man on his craft. If he had had one, he would never have heard the discouraging man on his craft. If he had had one, he would never have heard the discouraging and discordant sound issuing from the leadsman's "beef-hider" of "two and a half feet," 'two feet," and "two feet seant." No; his deck-hand would have called out about seven thousand fathoms, and Captain Noah could make good time on that water with his floating menagerie. Well, if we up Forked-Detrobecome husbandmen, and plant vineyards and drink wine, etc., etc., it won't be because and drink wine, etc., etc., it won't be because we have had, or now have, too much water,
